CITES AND THE SEA

CASE STUDY: EUROPEAN EEL, ANGUILLA ANGUILLA

Florian Stein F.Stein@SustainableEelGroup.org

Background | European eels

- 50% of 16 freshwater eel species are globally traded (plus marine species)
- Only European eel is listed in CITES Appendix II

Background | European eels

- Trade across Europe's outer borders is prohibited (2010)
- Non-EU countries: national restriction and trade bans
- Morphological distinction

Main issues | European eels

- Trafficking: 300 M fish pa
- Inconsistencies in trade data
- Listing & EU ban: effect on other species

Main issues | European eels

 Usage of wrong codes: massive impact on trade data, e.g.:

1 kg FIG = 3,000 fish

1 kg LIV = 3 fish

Main issues | European eels

 Confusion: codes & units (life stages, commodity types, specimen vs kg) under current CITES codes system

Solutions? | European eels

- E-AC30-Com-05-R
- E-CoP18-063 (adopted!)
- Improvement by minor changes in specimen codes!

63. Eels (Anguilla spp.)

The Chair of the Animals Committee introduced document CoP18 Doc. 63, noting that Decisions 17.186 to 17.189 of CoP17 had been fully implemented with support from the European Union.

Canada, Egypt, Japan, Morocco, New Zealand and the Republic of Korea supported the proposed draft decisions presented in Annex 4 of document CoP18 Doc. 63. Both Canada and New Zealand expressed concern with over-commitment of CITES resources on non-CITES-listed eel species.

The United States of America supported the proposed draft decisions in Annex 4, subject to the following amendments:

- 18.AA d): "develop measures or implement more effectively existing measures to improve the traceability of eels in trade (both live and dead):"
- 18.BB d): "improve traceability of Anguilla spp. in trade (both live and dead); and"

The European Union supported the deletion of Decisions 17.186 to 17.189, and the proposed draft decisions subject to the following amendments:

- 18.AA a): "submit any non-detriment finding studies on European eel they have undertaken to the Secretariat for inclusion on the CITES website; explore the different approaches that might be taken for making non-detriment findings for European eels traded as fingerlings (FIG) compared with those traded as other live eels (LIV); collaborate and share information with other Parties regarding such studies and their outcome, especially where the Parties share catchments or water bodies; seek review and advice from the Animals Committee or other suitable body on any non-detriment findings for European eel where appropriate:"
- 18.CC b): "collate available information on the biology of Anguilla anguilla in collaboration with experts, including the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) Anguillid Specialist Group, with a view to determining whether the-species glass eel (fingerling) lifestage can be considered to have a "low probability of surviving to adulthood", and report its findings to the Animals Committee;"

New Zealand supported the amendments proposed by the European Union and the United States, and welcomed the focus on traceability. Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia asked the Secretariat to publish export quotas by 1 January of each year, and Algeria asked the Animals Committee to provide expert advice and support to inventory its national eel population. Egypt identified the need for greater clarity on the large-scale sustainability of stocks, and the Republic of Korea offered to update the next meeting of the Animals Committee on national and regional eel conservation efforts.

The Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals (CMS) reported that in-situ eel conservation and conservation of habitats would be further addressed at its forthcoming COP13. The International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), speaking also on behalf of the Zoological Society of London and TRAFFIC, supported the amendments in Annex 3 resulting from the 30th meeting of the Animals Committee, while warning of the need to address the impact on other eel species of the 2009 listing in Appendix II of the European Eel. The Global Guardian Trust, speaking also on behalf of the Japanese Eel Farmers Society and the IWMC World Conservation Trust, reported on regional collaboration between Anguilla japonica range States.

The Committee agreed to support the deletion of Decisions 17.186 to 17.189. The draft decisions proposed in Annex 4 to document CoP18 Doc. 63 without the square brackets, subject to the amendments proposed by the European Union and the United States of America, were accepted.

Specimen codes | European eels

| Specimen code | Description | Products/Commodity | Unit |
|---------------|-------------|--|------|
| FIG | Fingerling | Live fish (< 12cm) | kg |
| LIV | Live | Live fish (> 12cm) | kg |
| BOD | Body | Dead fish (entire fish only) | kg |
| MEA | Meat | Dead fish (fresh and processed fillet for human consumption) | kg |

Source codes | European eels

| Specimen code | Description | Products/Commodity | |
|---------------|-------------|--------------------------------|--|
| R | Ranching | Specimen raised in aquaculture | |

Discussion should be referred to the Standing Committee's intersessional working group on captive-bred and ranched specimens

Customs codes | European eels

Better harmonisation of customs codes is urgently needed

Key Recommendations |

- Mechanism to facilitate traceability
- Strengthen collaboration
- Standardisation of ratios for conversion
